

AUTHOR'S BIO

Christine McMahon has always enjoyed a good story and the craft of writing but didn't pick up the challenge of a novel until after her mother, mother-in-law, and lastly her beloved dog, Fan, all died of cancer during a two-month period.

That catalyst spurred her into taking some time to pursue a past pleasure. Always needing to be busy, she picked up an empty journal and began jotting down the notes of a story that came to mind about a boy named Jamy.

“Jamy evolved naturally. I've never had to worry about “Who” he was because every part of his story was there instinctively. He has been a joy to write about even through his dark days as portrayed in my first novel, Choices Made: The Street Years.

His great drive to survive and make a better life for himself and others moves his story forward as he lives his life and learns the hard lessons given him.”

Christine and her husband, Joe, and their champion Rhodesian Ridgebacks live in rural Wisconsin on a restored prairie.

“Thank you for your interest in Choices Made: The Street Years and I hope you will continue to join Jamy in Choices Made: Fathers and Sons scheduled for release in 2006.
